Timely child and youth well-being data released by the Children and Youth Planning Table

Disaggregated Gender Snapshot from the 2021 Waterloo Region Youth Impact Survey is now available.

Waterloo Region, June 2022 – Disaggregated gender data from the Youth Impact Survey (YIS) provides a much-needed snapshot of the lives of many children and youth in our community over the last year.

The Children and Youth Planning Table's (CYPT) vision of happy, healthy children and youth— today and tomorrow, applies to all children and youth in our community. Given the importance of centering equity, social inclusion, and anti-discrimination in our belonging-related work, the CYPT is disaggregating the 2021 Youth Impact Survey across a variety of demographic and identity-based dimensions.

This Snapshot focuses on gender and data has been disaggregated into three different categories. Those who identify as boys, those who identify as girls, and those who identify as another gender identity.

The CYPT, in partnership UNICEF Canada, Ontario Trillium Foundation (OTF), KW Community Foundation and the Canadian Index of Wellbeing (CIW) at the University of Waterloo ran the Waterloo Region Youth Impact Survey for young people in our community through the Spring of 2021. The survey was an opportunity for young people in our community to speak to their own well-being. Data from the 1074 young people in Waterloo Region who participated completed the survey was published in December of 2021.

The YIS asked questions across 9 dimensions of well-being based on the Canadian Index of Child and Youth Well-being including belonging, mental and emotional health, connection to the environment and more. The ultimate goal of the disaggregated YIS Snapshot Briefs is to provide members of our community with equity-focused insights that take into account the needs and interests of different groups of children and youth.

Fast Facts:

- 1074 youth from diverse backgrounds completed the Waterloo Region Waterloo Region Youth Impact Survey between April 30 and June 5, 2021.
- Aggregate data suggests that 64.1% of all YIS respondents said they felt a very strong or somewhat strong sense of belonging to their community. After disaggregating our data, we see that those identifying as a boy, or a girl reported almost identical levels of sense of belonging (66.6% and 66.2% respectively) however only 26.8% of respondents with a gender identity other than a boy or a girl report a very strong or somewhat strong sense of belonging This a 39.0 percentage point difference compared to the other groups.
- UNICEF Canada defines belonging as "feeling loved and supported and having mutually caring and respectful relationships."9 This love and support can come from many sources including friends, family, teachers, pets, and people in the community. Locally, when we think about belonging for children and youth, we recognize the importance of equity, relationships and attachment, and feeling valued, heard and included.
- Self-assessed mental health also saw significant differences between the three groups. Respondents with a gender identity other than boy or girl were least likely to indicate their mental health as more positive (17.1%) This is 50.7 percentage points lower than those who identify as a boy and 34.6 percentage points lower than those who identify as a girl.

Next Steps:

- The CYPT's next steps include disaggregating the data along eight other subpopulations of young people including: age, gender identity, racial identity, those with special needs and more. We are also working directly with young people in the community in co-creating meaningful actions to support the needs raised from the Youth Impact Survey.

Quotes from Respondents:

"Be more inclusive to trans and non-binary kids. I feel left out because everything is either for boys or girls and I don't wanna be the only non-binary person there and have to identify as female."

—2021 YIS Respondent

"Most of my family constantly mis genders me even though I have come out to some of them and there is this person who lives nearby me who is really rude and mean and homophobic and transphobic towards me. my sibling came out to me as non-binary so we support each other a lot."

—2021 YIS Respondent

Making Sense of these Findings:

"The CYPT Youth Impact Survey confirms what we expected to find of the experiences of 2SLGBTQ+ children and youth in our community. These youth are often vulnerable and many are not finding the supports they need to live safe and fulfilled lives as their authentic selves. I hope that these findings will help to encourage families, educators, service providers, and funders to consider carefully how they might work to improve the situation for 2SLGBTQ+ -- and especially transgender and non-binary -- youth here in Waterloo Region."
